Global Village V.I.P.
 January 18, 2011 // staff-blog // Gioel
 Our last day at al-Najah was beautifully unexpected. After the 'Arabic speech' (I must admit I have never been so nervous speaking in public), I was really touched by the Prezi presentations a group of students prepared for us. I wished I could have stopped time to sit and enjoy that moment. I did not know that this desire would have continued throughout the morning.
 Cutting the red ribbon at the entrance of the Global Village exposition was another strong emotion. I have never thought I would be asked to cut ...

RECREAR – platform for public benefit projects

The Spring Prize
A Young Oscars for Social and Environmental Innovation

We are setting up a global prize, think green young oscars, designed to reward young individuals and young businesses for their efforts to make the world a better place to live. We want to do this to create role models that we will then use to interest young people, first in developed countries in the world, of positive progress around social and environmental matters. This is an essential first step of re-engagement - to interest the public on their terms.

Our two main differentiators are:

Scale: we are aiming to appeal to the majority of young people in developed countries, not the closed groups of interest that form the audience for most social and environmental endeavours.

Aggregation: we will not reinvent the wheel - we will take all the amazing work that is already being done by established organisations and bring it to a mainstream audience. Partners that we are talking to, or are interested in talking to, include Ashoka, Acumen, Endeavor, Generation IM, and the Aspen Institute Energy & Environment Awards to name a few.

We will also partner with the most progressive global businesses as prize sponsors. We want these businesses to sponsor a prize where there is synergy with their own operations in order to achieve the maximum benefit for both the winner and the sponsor.

Where we can use help right now is in 3 specific areas:

- Any advice that your organisation might have around areas in which you see that improvements could be made with the plan.
- Any introductions that Recrear might be able to make into organisations that might be interested in partnering with us, sponsoring a prize, or providing initial seed funding so that I can continue to push this project forward full-time.
- Any introductions that you might be able to make to individuals who could lend the project
